About the University

The University of Pune is in the pursuit of excellence and one of the most progressive and cosmopolitan Universities in India. With 46 University departments, about 650 affiliated Colleges, over 300 recognized Institutions and more than 7 lakhs students, the University is multifaceted seat of learning.

About the Department of Anthropology

The Department of Anthropology is located in the 'Bharatratna Dr. Babasaheb Ambedkar Bhavan' on the beautiful campus of the University, surrounded by lush green environment with scenic beauty. Established in 1939, at the Deccan College, the combined department of Sociology and Anthropology was chaired by the late Dr. (Mrs.) Irawati Karve. The combined department was shifted to the University campus in 1973 and an independent department of Anthropology was established in 1977.

The Department endeavors to extend anthropological knowledge and field data for wider applications in various fields of human action and encourages humanitarian consideration in policy decisions and implementation. By any measure, the University and the Department are among the best in the country.
